Ron Colón was birthed out of an appreciation for the rich history, soil, and culture of El Salvador. Since the 1920s Ingenio La Cabana has been growing and processing sugar cane near the Mayan ruins of Cihuatán, north of San Salvador. In 2004, Cabana built the distillery Licorera Cihuatán, which is overseen by Master Distiller and Blender Gabriella Ayala, and is the source of the Salvadorian rum used in Ron Colón products. At the distillery, El Salvadoran sugar cane is run through a century old mill as the starting point for their portfolio of rums.

One of Ron Colón's goals is to bridge worlds. With their rum portfolio they connected rum and coffee, bringing together the two finest raw ingredients exported from El Salvador. They continue to innovate, bridging industries and categories to create new flavor experiences with each of their products.

This limited-edition RCS 100 was mashed, distilled and aged at MGP's historic distillery in Lawrenceburg, Indiana. Using historic whiskey production parameters and proprietary yeast that dates back to the Seagram's ownership, its time tested since 1933. All barrels were new charred oak barrels, aged in the humid brick warehouse's on top two floors. This climate allows alcohol to evaporate and makes for a more mellow whiskey.
